

Tuesday January 23rd, 2018:

How Will La Nina Impact Crops in 2018?

2:00 PM Live Broadcast (no recording)

Drew Lerner from World Weather Inc. will share his forecast for the 2017 row crop growing season. His long-term forecast in recent years has provided our listeners with helpful guidance. You will receive a global weather picture and how it will impact US grain prices.

This event will only be available live. No recording will be available.

Wednesday January 24th, 2018:

High Yields the New Normal?

2:00 PM Live Broadcast (Recording will be available.)

Allendale will cover all major fundamental factors influencing corn, soybeans, and wheat pricing. We'll also include a special discussion on corn yield and explore why analyst estimates varied so greatly from USDA. For the producers we will provide specific strategies you will be able to put into action. Our leading chart analyst will share insight into probable price directions.

Overview – Rich Nelson (Chief Strategist)

Corn – Steve Georgy (President of Allendale)

Beans – Jim McCormick (Senior Broker)

Wheat – Rich Nelson

Thursday January 25th, 2018:

Are We in For a Bull Ride in 2018?

2:00 PM Live Broadcast (Recording will be available.)

Allendale's Rich Nelson will be joined by Ryan Ettner to delve into the fundamental factors affecting cattle prices in 2018 with a special emphasis on US demand. Are feeder prices going to come under pressure due to feedlot margins? Will larger feeder supplies fill feedlot and expansion demand? Get answers to your marketing decision questions. Allendale Analysts will also provide strategies based on technical patterns. The strategies will cover ideas you can implement immediately.

Overview – Rich Nelson (Chief Strategist)

Cattle – Ryan Ettner (Broker)

Hogs – Rich Nelson